

Why you should give your email list a good spring cleaning!

We all use the catchphrase “spring cleaning,” but it’s actually appropriate anytime necessity dictates that businesses get around to the housekeeping tasks they’ve intended to do for months.

When cleaning time comes around, email databases are great candidates for decluttering, scrubbing, vacuuming, and then polishing to a fine sheen.

the bad news

More than 20% of email registrations contain typos, syntax, domain, and other errors.

50% or more of a typical B2C file can be inactive.

78% of organizations have had email deliverability challenges in the last 12 months.

30% of people on your email list change their email addresses annually or become inactive

More than 90% of deliverability issues stem from problems with the underlying email list.
